Atlas as a kind of Google Map, where you can o the organ to tissue to cell level, and that has standing healthy biology and what goes wrong
ANN, Head of Cellular Genetics at the Wellcome and co-chair of the Human Cell Atlas.

e characterization of many individual cells and ranscriptomes), owing to both technological gical insight. First, over the past ten years, ow scientists to capture the transcriptomes of ngle experiment. Second, the transcriptome — me's first observable trait, or phenotype — is ell states, as revealed over the past 30 years of York University Grossman School of Medicine,

Innovations in Vaccines: Unraveling the Diverse Landscape of Vaccine Development
DP Chaturvedi, R Ghangal, N Bansal & S Kumari

24

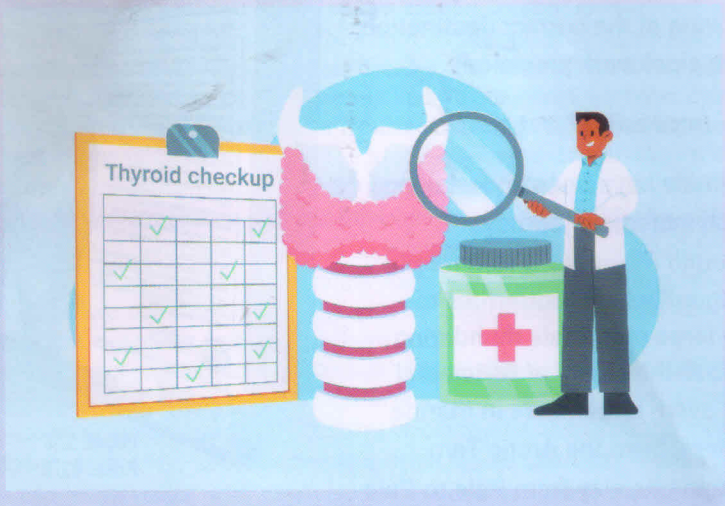
EDITORIAL

Healthy Beginnings, Hopeful Futures
Need to prioritise maternal and newborn health 9
Sonali Nagar

ARTICLES

Vaccines to End TB — Where They Stand In Preventing TB 31
Somdatta Karak

I have a 'Good Cancer' 36
Natasha Das



Bracing to Feed a Populous Warm World
Towards Nudging Plants to Produce More 42
M Saleemuddin

A Revisit to the Fascinating World of Vitamin D 46
RP Chamoli and AM Painuly

Biophilia: Man's Innate Love for Nature 48
RC Parida and HS Fatesingh

REPORT

Research Scholars Conference in Health Sciences and Life Sciences 2025: A Catalyst for Future Researchers 50
Raghu Ram Achar and Biju Dharmapalan

SCIENCE FICTION

Ramatai's Dilemma 52
Revathi

Spectrum 10
Indian S&T Breakthroughs 34
Photofeature 54
Nature's Marvels 56
What's New 58
Test Your Knowledge 60
Puzzle Corner 62