

Brain power

■ A single human brain cell may be far more powerful than scientists once realised. Researchers at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in Israel found that cortical neurons can perform remarkably complex computations, giving them capabilities more like tiny biological computers than simple on-off switches. This could help explain why the human brain supports abilities such as language, imagination and mathematics.

AGENCIES

